DENEEN'S FORCES WIN IN CHICAGO BY BIG MAJORITY

Senator Scores A Landslide Victory At The Polls

GOV. SMALL DEFEATED

Election Returns Are In From Two-Thirds of The Districts

CHICAGO, Apr. 11—(INS)—In what is characterized as "the greatest political upheaval in the history of Illinois," the state Republican faction headed by United States Senator Charles S. Deneen has scored a landslide victory over the "America first" forces headed by Governor Len Small, Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago, and Robert E. Crowe, State's Attorney of Cook County.

Incomplete returns today from yesterday's bitterly contested primary election indicate Louis L. Emmerson, Secretary of State, has defeated Len Small for the Republican nomination for Governor by a majority of 350,000 to 400,000.

Returns from approximately two-thirds of the State's 6,634 precincts show Emmerson is leading the present Governor by more than 250,000 votes. Additional returns are expected to swell this total at least 100,000.

With Emmerson setting the pace, practically every important Deneen candidate in the State, and in the hotly contested county of Cook (Chicago), were swept to victory on the crest of his record landslide.

Otis F. Glenn, the Deneen entry for the nomination of United States Senator, won over Frank L. Smith, the rejected former Senator-elect, by an estimated majority of 150,000.

Governor Len Small and Mayor William Hale Thompson have conceded defeat of their ticket.

In the bitter Cook county contest between State's attorney Robert E. Crowe, and Judge John A. Swanson for the nomination of State's attorney, the Deneen tidal wave carried Swanson to victory by an estimated majority of 125,000.

Emmerson carried to victory his running mates for Lieutenant Governor and Secretary of State. Fred E Sterling, incumbent, won the former berth and William J. Stratton, the latter.

Oscar E. Carlstrom, attorney general, who sought renomination for the office under the Deneen banner, was successful over State Senator John Dailey of the "America first" combine.

Ruth H. McCormick and Henry R. Rathbone won the nomination for congressmen-at-large.

Directress Is Pleased With Talent Which Is Found Here

Miss B. Vivian Taylor, of the John B. Rogers Producing Company, who has been hard at work for the past several weeks on the forthcoming production of "That's That," to be presented at the Grand Theatre tomorrow evening, under the auspices of Bristol High School students, said last night that the cast promises to give this attractive musical comedy about the best presentation it has ever had.

"The principals are handling their parts well," she said, "and the choruses are working with unusual enthusiasm and pep. I believe Bristol High is going to have about the best show I have been able to produce anywhere. 'That's That' is a thoroughly amusing and highly entertaining musical show.'

Miss Taylor states that much of the success of the rehearsals has been due to the faithful co-operation of Miss Hilda MacArthur, pianist for the production.

Miss MacArthur is well known to local audiences as a pianist of ability and as music can make or break a production, the local committee considers itself fortunate in being able to command the services of so capable an accompanist and is happy to know that this very important part of the show is in responsible hands.

Inter-Continental Link Plan Transit Interests

By WILSON WATERS
International Illustrated News Staff Correspondent

YOU may be able to make a direct trip to Europe. Plans have been suggested by Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania R. R. system, for a fast four day service across the North Atlantic.

Montauk Point, at the eastern tip of Long Island, would be the American terminal of the express steamers and connections will be made there by the Long Island Railroad, one of the Pennsylvania lines, Atterbury said.

His announcement, made in a letter to Representative Fred A. Britton (R.), of Illinois, was the first declaration that the Pennsylvania system is prepared to give full co-operation to the new ship service which its backers declare will revolutionize trans-Atlantic passenger transportation:

"If we were asked to become financially interested, we would, of course, be glad to give the matter careful consideration, but at this time can hardly say what our position would be in that respect."

Atterbury endorses Montauk Point as a terminal for the express lines, pointing out that much time could be saved by rail connections there for passengers, mail and urgent freight and express matter. He said:

"A fast fleet of passenger ships between Montauk Point (Fort Pond Bay) and Europe

GEN. W. W. ATTERBURY

is of great importance to the country and of special interest to our railroad.

"Fort Pond Bay is a natural safe harbor and presents no engineering difficulties.

"In shape the bay is semi-circular and in area it is fairly comparable with that section of the Hudson River between Twenty-second street and Forty-second street. The general depth of the bay is about five feet more than the draft of the largest passenger ship afloat."

Commenting on the letters, Representative Britten said:

"I am hopeful that Summer of 1930 will see the inauguration of four day ships across the ocean."

DRIVE FOR SCOUT FUNDS IS MAKING PROGRESS

Time Limit is Drawing Near For the Closing of Drive

ONE QUARTER IS GIVEN

With the time limit drawing near for the completion of the special efforts being made to secure enough funds to purchase and partially equip Camp Buccou, the Bucks County Boy Scout camp, Chairman Carl Wenzel and the special members of his committee: Lester Thorne, V. V. Vansant, Minot J. Hill, Wesley Spencer, Lester Shoemaker, and James H. Brooks, are making a strenuous effort to complete their list of selected individuals.

The Bristol district committee is making splendid progress, especially from the encouraging support that has been given them by those who have already contributed. Over one quarter of the goal of $20,000 has already been pledged outside of this district for payment by the 15th of May, with a considerable percentage of this already having been paid.

An article in the Gossiper section of the Doylestown Daily Intelligencer portrays the feelings of the majority of those who have contributed:

I'm sorry not to be at liberty to pass along an interesting story of what the Boy Scout movement did for one little boy, but the point of it is that it turned that little fellow from a possible life of crime to become one of the most conscientious, honest and polite little chaps you can imagine.

No doubt it is doing as much for other boys, or benefitting them in a great many ways. It gives them good

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 11, 1928

THE DANGER

Without a doubt a majority of the men, women and children of the United States have read the Constitution and there is just as much reason to believe that a majority of that number have read without understanding. The preamble of that immortal instrument—the Constitution—is memorized by thousands, but how woefully few comprehend its significance. The nation's lawmakers—members of congress and state legislatures—are as guilty, if not more so, of this fault than the public.

There is a general idea that the pioneers and founders of the nation came to America to seek religious liberty and political independence. But it is not of record that any of them came to this country with any idea of political independence. Those who came here to enjoy religious liberty did so for the simple reason that whatever restriction of belief or practice they had suffered in Europe was produced by civil authority.

It is important for anyone who wishes to understand the Constitution to remember this. The basic reason for the forefathers leaving Europe can be accurately and fully summed up in just three words—too much law.

It makes no difference whether the burden of law is imposed by the will of a czar, or emperor, or king. It does not matter if it is set up by a reichsrath, a rigsdag, a cortes, a storthing, a divan, a musnud, a sanhedrim, a parliament, a legislature, or a congress. Call it what you will. It may be one man, or ten or fifty, or even a majority vote of all the people.

The United States was colonized by men who sought to escape from too much law. The Constitution was written to protect men from too much law. And the gravest danger to the United States is that the burden of law will overtax the Constitution.

REVENGE

Through past ages wild justice decimated human beings. Even today, respect for property and human life is but skin deep in the anatomy of civilization. Granted a well-ordered home in childhood, an education normally effective, and adult activities in a community duly regardful of civil rights, "cultivated" justice for the most part prevails. Lacking all this, or any essential part of it, mankind quickly reverts to the passions of the jungle and the clan. Do away with decent home life, with effective education and habitual regard for law, and gang law takes its place.

When a New York gangster was questioned by the police concerning the murder of a member of a rival gang his serious answer was:

"Listen, Captain. This is a personal affair. The police ain't got no business interferin'."

The morals of the gang are those of the jungle and the stone age. Gang law presumes the individual to be a law himself; or, that failing, his cause is taken up by his clan and waged with all the arts of ambush and treachery. When one of its members is slain the gang never appeals to the police for justice, but takes the law in its own hands.

"Revenge is wild justice," wrote Bacon, and he might have added that the instinctive desire for revenge is only partly suppressed in man, ever ready to resort to "wild justice."

Many a faint heart gets stronger in the faint fire light.

SYNOPSIS

Because Jakie, son of Cantor Rabinowitz, prefers jazz to Synagogue music, he leaves home. Ten years elapse. Jakie, now Jack Robin, obtains, through Mary Dale, a dancer, the role of jazz singer in a musical comedy. The Cantor, discovering his son's profession, disowns him. Jack's show is opening the Eve of Yom Kippur. Dillings, the backer, jealous of Mary's love for Jack, takes his money out of the show, leaving Lee, the producer, dependent on Jack for success. Yudelson, the Cantor's friend, comes to tell Jack that his father is ill and asks him to sing in the Synagogue that night in his father's place.

"Oh, Jack! Jack, I want to see you a minute." Jack could hear Lee calling him from across the stage during a lull in the music.

"I'm over here, Mr. Lee. Can you come here?" He saw the producer coming behind the drop. "Mr. Lee, listen a minute. I don't know how I'm going to explain this—but—excuse me—Mr. Lee, this is Mr. Yudelson, an old friend of my family. He's just come up to tell me that my father down on the East Side is very sick—and——"

"Your father—on the East Side?" Lee looked at Jack, questioningly, and surveyed Yudelson with a puzzled air.

"Yes, I know I held out on you, Mr. Lee—that other afternoon when I didn't want to talk about my people," Jack was talking against time, quickly, nervously. "But I had quarreled with my father—he's a Cantor in a Synagogue—about going on the stage and I felt that I never wanted to go back there again—I wanted to live my own life in another way. But tonight is the eve of the Day of Atonement; Mr. Yudelson's come to tell me that my father is sick—my mother sent him to ask me to come down and sing in my father's place tonight. My father trained me to be a Cantor—until I ran away—and—"

"You're sure you can't sing tonight"

"But my dear boy, you know as well as I do that's impossible!" Lee almost laughed aloud at the suggestion, so preposterous it seemed to him.

"Isn't there any way we could arrange it?"

"Only tonight and tomorrow until sundown," Yudelson added his plea to Jack's.

"Absolutely not," Lee returned emphatically, including both Jack and Yudelson in his answer. "I'm banking on one thing only in this show, and that's you, Jack. Let me tell you something. I've been an actor myself—Oh, yes, I've been through the mill, too. My mother died one afternoon, and I went on that night. Furthermore, Jack," he turned to the singer and spoke in low tones, "something happened just a little while ago that leaves me in a pretty tight position—more than you know. It means that I'm depending so much on you, now, that it isn't even funny. I've given you your chance—now give me mine. Tell him you can't do it," he nodded towards Yudelson and turned away.

"Is that your boss?" Yudelson asked as Lee crossed the stage.

"Yes-s-s," Jack considered slowly. He was trying to think of some way to make Yudelson understand his position—some way of appealing to him. "Listen, Yudelson," he began, "do you know how much it costs to put on a show like this? Do you know that Mr. Lee and other people have put thousands and thousands of dollars into all this," he waved his hand toward the stage. "Just as everything stands now this show has cost—well, somewhere around two hundred thousand dollars."

"Oi—oi, oi! Two hundred thousand dollars?" Yudelson looked amazed. "Is the true, Jakie?"

"Yes, the big musical shows all cost about that much—and sometimes more. You heard Mr. Lee say he was depending on me to put this over. Now, I ask you, you're a business man—can I walk out on Mr. Lee after he's staked all this money on—on—well, on me—and just because my mama wants me to sing one night in a Synagogue—don't you understand, now, Yudelson?"

Yudelson shrugged his shoulders, but reason was beginning to dawn. "Yeh, Jakie, I suppose so. You can't sing tonight—so I'll have to tell your mama and listen to that voice from Levy's." He turned to go.

"Levy? That's the sexton, isn't it? Why, he's got a fine voice," Jack tried to lighten the blow.

"Yeh, like a nanny goat," Yudelson sneered. "Nu, what can I do. You're sure you can't come," he asked once more.

"If I could, I would. But you see how it is and try to explain to mama and the committee."

"All right, Jakie. So, good-bye, Leshono Tovo Tikosamu," he held out his hand.

"Thank you, Yudelson," Jack shooks hands, "and Happy New Year to you, too."

"See, you didn't forget, did you Jakie?" the jeweler smiled, pleased at Jack's rememberance of the salutation.

"No, I didn't forget," Jack answered.

He watched his visitor out of sight and then sat down heavily on a chair in a corner. He sighed brokenly and his head drooped disconsolately. Was this right—this thing he had done, he questioned himself. To whom, did he owe allegiance? To his mother, his father, his race—or to this new, demanding mistress, the theatre? His father sick—for the first time unable to sing in the synagogue. His father had called him to do his duty as a son and as a Cantor—and he had refused. He—the son of a Cantor—had refused to sing at Yom Kippur.

"The old boy gone?" Lee interrupted Jack's thoughts and brought him to with a start. "Did you make him understand you couldn't go down there?"

"Yes, I told him—I explained," Jack scarcely noticed what he was saying.

"That's right! Now, come on, brace up. You've got to go on in a minute. You haven't time to get your make-up on now, but get it on during intermission. God, boy! Dress rehearsal's on—just this, and then the big opening tonight! Aren't you thrilled? Your name in all the papers tomorrow—your name all over Broadway—"

"And he won't be able to sing tonight—for the first time in his life he won't be able to sing in synagogue," Jack was murmuring to himself, scarcely heeding Lee's words.

"Here, here, Jack, snap out of it," Lee shook the boy by the shoulders. "You're all right, now. You're going to be the hit of the show." He pushed Jack not at all unkindly towards his entrance.

Jack shook himself and threw back his shoulders, but he was swallowing hard. "I'll do the best I can—tonight—Mr. Lee," he forced the words from his lips. "I only hope I won't disappoint you."

With a crash the music took up the ribald air of a jazz tune, and Jack stepped onto the stage.

CHAPTER XV

The still quiet of impending gloom hung over the home of Cantor Rabinowitz. People moved to and fro with uneasy, hushed steps; spoke in unnatural, lowered voices. The odor of medicines and antiseptics clung heavily to the air. Neighbors came and went on tiptoe, bringing little bowls and baskets covered with white cloths. The Cantor was desperately ill—so ill that Dr. O'Shaughnessy had ordered a hospital bed immediately, but at Mrs. Rabinowitz's insistent pleadings had compromised by sending white-clad nurses to look after the sick man. Mrs. Rabinowitz herself was worn and pale with nights of watching and interminable efforts to do something—anything, that might provide comfort for her husband.

Now she waited anxiously for the return of Yudelson and the news he would bring from the theatre and her Jakie. The Cantor rested uneasily, under the supervision of the day nurse, and she could do but little. To her mind, however, there could be only one answer—Jakie would come and sing "Kol Nidre." Jakie might have done many things, be many things, but he was a good son and he would not fail in his duty to his parents and his religion. He might sing jazz in the theatre, but when the call of the synagogue came, he would respond.

She opened the door in answer to Yudelson's knock, almost expecting to find Jack there with him. But as she saw the downcast mien and the somber look of the jeweler, she gasped.

Gives Party In Honor Of Husband's Birthday

Mrs. John Keeley, of Cedar avenue and Main street, Croydon, gave a delightful party in honor of her husband's birthday last Saturday evening. Nineteen guests were present and the evening was spent at cards, followed by music, singing and recitations, after which a tempting lunch was served, which was enjoyed immensely by the diners.

The table decorations and favorites were pink and yellow and the beautifully decorated birthday cake was resplendent with pink and yellow candles. Mr. Keeley was the recipient of many gifts, and after good wishes, toasts and general hilarity had been indulged in the guests departed in the wee sma' hours, wishing their host many happy returns of the day.

Those who attended the party were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Keeley, of Glenside, Pa.; Miss Pauline Brandeis, of Chester, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. John Keeley, Jr.; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Keenan, Mr. and Mrs. William Dennison, Mr. Louis J. Bachman, and Master Jack Keeley, all of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. J. Walter Parish, of Croydon Manor; Mr. and Mrs. William Moran, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Doldi, and Mr. and Mrs. John Bauers, all of Croydon.

BACK TO PLOWSHARES

No finer example of hammering swords into plowshares can be found than that offered by the great Krupp works at Essen, Germany. At one time the world's largest and most widely known institution for the manufacture of munitions and artillery equipment, famed in more recent years as the home of the "Big Bertha" and the gas bomb, Krupp's has turned from war to peace, and is about to take rank, if it has not already done so, as the world's greatest producer of agricultural implements.

The conversion of the former cannon factory into one for the manufacture of peace-time products has been completed within the past three years. The Treaty of Versailles provided that cannon tubes should be broken into bits, that steel armor plates should be smashed, and that havoc should be wrought with all the instruments formerly used in the making of war material. Krupp's was among the last to fall beneath that order. But it kept the faith. More than 2,000 machines, some 400 plants and furnaces and 600,000 tools, valued at $100,000,000 and formerly used in turning out the equipment of war, were broken up and junked or melted into raw material. For three and one-half years an allied commission, consisting of seven English officers and one French official, remained in the great Essen plant to make sure that the work of destruction was complete.

Before the war Krupp gave employment to 43,000 men. This number rose during the war to about 115,000, but on January 1, 1919, was reduced to the pre-war number. Today there are between 50,000 and 60,000 men on the Krupp pay rolls, all engaged in turning out excavating and dredging machinery, cream separators, boilers, turbines, bridge material, dynamos, electrical equipment. One branch of the great industry makes freight cars; another devotes its attention to small art castings, and still another to the production of a rustless steel.

The spectacular grandeur of Krupp's has not been visibly impaired. But there must be a far happier army of workers within its walls. — Dayton News.—(Adv.)

That, no doubt, is why there appears to be a certainty that enough men and women in Bucks county will give $100 apiece within a few weeks to make possible payment for a permanent camp site where thousands of boys can experience the same sort of helpfulness for many more years.
